INCIDENT UPDATE: 2500 Campbell Street

On June 6, 2006 at 5:30 p.m. the Houston Fire Department responded to a fire in northeast Houston at the Community Fellowship Baptist Church at 2500 Campbell Street. Upon arrival, firefighters found heavy smoke conditions from the fellowship hall and began an interior fire attack and primary search. The fire went into defensive mode and two additional taps were pulled for manpower due to heat and workload. The fire was tapped out at 6:48 p.m. with no reported injuries.

The fire caused an estimated $80,000 in structural damage. Arson investigators determined it was caused "due to a refrigerator support leg resting on its power cord causing resistance heating and igniting combustibles."
